Mergers and acquisitions (M&A) are critical to the growth of many middle market companies. Yet most executives do deals infrequently. As a result, many are surprised by the challenges faced during the process. Careful preparation that starts well before a deal is on the table can help companies avoid some obstacles, be better equipped to surmount others, and improve the overall success of M&A transactions.
M&A is critical to growth in the middle market

60% of middle market companies that participate in M&A say it is vital to their growth strategy

26% is the share of growth these companies expect M&A to contribute

There is a steady rhythm of deals, but companies have limited experience

- ROUGHLY 20% of middle market companies complete an acquisition annually
- 70% of companies that made an acquisition in the past 3 years had little or no previous experience
- ABOUT 5% of middle market companies sell to or merge into another business each year
- 90% of companies that sold or merged in the past 3 years had little or no previous experience

Most companies rely on themselves to find targets or buyers

Resources used by buyers to find a target:

- Lawyer/Law Firm: 33%
- Consultant: 28%
- Investment Bank: 21%
- Outside Accountants/Accounting Firm: 20%
- Tax Advisor: 20%

ABOUT THE U.S. MIDDLE MARKET

The U.S. middle market comprises nearly 200,000 companies that generate more than $10 trillion in combined revenue annually. The middle market is defined by companies with annual revenues between $10 million and $1 billion. In addition to their geographic and industry diversity, these companies are both publicly and privately held and include family-owned businesses, sole proprietorships, and private equity-owned companies. While the middle market represents approximately 3% of all U.S. companies, it accounts for a third of U.S. private-sector GDP and jobs. The U.S. middle market is the segment that drives U.S. growth and competitiveness.

ABOUT THE RESEARCH

Four hundred strategic decision makers from middle market companies that either completed an acquisition or sale in the past three years or that are highly likely to sell a company or part of a company in the next three years responded to a survey designed to understand attitudes and perceptions related to M&A, evaluate the importance of M&A to middle market companies, identify drivers of M&A activity, and gain insight into the obstacles and challenges involved in deal-making. The report also draws on more than five years of data from the National Center for the Middle Market’s Middle Market Indicator surveys of 1,000 executives. The learnings and takeaways are intended to inform both middle market executives and their external advisors and consultants in order to facilitate more successful deals in the future.
