DOUG FARREN

MANAGING DIRECTOR,
NATIONAL CENTER FOR THE MIDDLE MARKET

In October 2024, the National Center for the Middle Market celebrated its 13th anniversary as the nation's only research center of its kind focused on the middle third of the U.S. economy: the middle market. During that time, we've established a robust research library across different topics and themes, most notably the semiannual Middle Market Indicator (MMI). The MMI is the longest continually running survey of middle market companies measuring performance, sentiment and challenges.

But a robust opportunity such as supporting middle market companies requires much more than research alone. The center works tirelessly to engage audiences across the country through a variety of channels. Whether it be visitors to our website, attendees at live and virtual events from coast to coast, subscribers to our newsletter, or listeners to our podcast, there exists a steady stream of insights to help drive growth and competitiveness. In addition, we support education through undergraduate courses at Fisher College of Business as well as partnerships to help advance executive education. The NCMM platform is broad and deep.

None of the significant achievements outlined in this Impact Report can be achieved without collaboration and expertise. Our team is appreciative of the strong relationships with Fisher faculty to help shape our work. We are equally grateful for the support and input of our sponsors – Chubb and Visa – as well as projects sponsors. And the other partners across the country who share a passion for supporting middle market companies in their growth journey.

We are proud of our accomplishments but realize there is much more to do. As you read through the sections, I invite you to learn more about NCMM and engage with us where appropriate. A great place to start is www.middlemarketcenter.org for more information.

Leveling Up Middle Market Knowledge and Support

NCMM serves a diverse group of middle market stakeholders by telling the middle market's performance story and by providing innovative resources and opportunities that support the middle market's ongoing growth. The center does this work by consistently focusing its efforts in three critical areas: research, outreach and education.

Diving Deep into a New Era of Growth

The National Center for the Middle Market's continued pulse checks on the health of the U.S. middle market, and now the entire North American middle market, leave no doubt that mid-sized companies are indeed the growth champions of the broader economy. During 2023 and 2024, the U.S. middle market posted average year-over-year revenue growth of 12.3% and year-over-year employment growth of 10.1%, significantly above the all-time average growth rates of 7.4% and 5.0% respectively. Middle market companies have sustained strong performance numbers since recovering from the impacts of the 2020 pandemic, signaling that the middle market has emerged stronger, healthier and very well positioned to navigate current and future headwinds to growth.

EXPLORING GROWTH DRIVERS

Given this impressive snapshot, the center's research over the past two years has looked more closely at specific factors contributing to growth. In collaboration with our sponsors and several new research partners, we explored the impact of key growth drivers, including digital transformation, a differentiated workforce, risk management practices and approach to globalization. These studies uncovered dozens of critical new insights that middle market companies, and the organizations that support them, can leverage to help shape the ongoing growth journeys of these businesses.

STUDYING SUBSEGMENTS OF THE MARKET

Other research initiatives delved deeper into the practices of key subsegments of the middle market. We conducted in-depth interviews with the leaders of Black-owned middle market firms, some of the fastest-growing companies within the sector, to better understand the unique challenges and opportunities inherent to these businesses' experience.

DEVELOPING A NORTH AMERICAN PERSPECTIVE

For the first time, the center expanded its signature Middle Market Indicator research to include companies beyond the U.S. border; our inaugural Canadian Middle Market report provides valuable benchmark data for the middle market economy of our closest neighbor while affording a more wholistic perspective of North American middle market performance overall.

Collectively, the center's research over the past two years gives us new perspective and several new lenses through which to better understand the growth of North America's most dynamic economic segment.

Expanding Stakeholders' Understanding of Middle Market Performance

In 2023 and 2024, the center completed waves 39 through 42 of the Middle Market Indicator, our signature barometer of U.S. middle market performance. The MMI semiannual survey of 1,000 different c-suite middle market executives each period tracks key performance indicators, including revenue and employment growth, future projections, economic confidence, investment appetites and major headwinds to growth. The center has amassed 13 years of data, representing the largest body of research and insight into middle market performance and trends ever assembled.

With each wave of research, the center publishes a downloadable version of the full report, accompanying insights and perspectives, updated interactive trend charts, and supplemental industry-specific snapshots. Center Managing Director Doug Farren hosts a webinar to unpack the data from each new release and explore the insights behind the numbers.

Canada's Inaugural Middle Market Indicator

Building the North American Middle Market Perspective

In June 2024, the center, in partnership with Visa, intentionally expanded the scope of our middle market research to include companies outside of the United States for the first time. For this inaugural effort, we turned to our closest neighbors to the north. By studying the performance of Canadian middle market companies, the center sought to gain a more wholistic understanding of the broader North American middle market while also discovering similarities and differences between middle market companies operating in the two countries.

The study uncovered new insights that suggest that middle market companies are critical not only to the United States economy but to the national economies of other countries where they operate. Indeed, Canadian middle market companies performed just as well, if not better, than U.S. middle market companies for the period studied (June 2023 through June 2024). Together, the research and resulting report provide essential benchmark data for tracking future performance of the Canadian middle market while also expanding the overall perspective of middle market performance.

Finding Answers to Pressing Questions: Exploring High-Growth Segments and Key Growth Drivers

Since opening its doors in 2011, the center has built a foundational knowledge of middle market performance, definitively establishing the approximately 200,000 middle market companies in the United States as the market that moves the American economy forward.

Over the past few years, middle market companies have collectively raised the bar for growth — and performance appears to have stabilized at this higher level. Of course, within this impressive group of companies, there will always be those that consistently outperform their peers and set the pace. The center maintains a particular interest in understanding these growth champions and, specifically, the shared drivers of their stellar performance, in order to derive the insights that will be most valuable to the center's many audiences.

To that end, our latest body of research expands our foundational knowledge, delving wider and deeper to peel back the layers of the middle market growth story. With the support of dedicated research partners, we have unearthed richer insights around the attitudes and actions that facilitate and sustain middle market company growth in an era of unprecedented middle market performance.

THE RESEARCH QUESTION:

WHY ARE BLACK-OWNED MIDDLE MARKET COMPANIES GROWING SO QUICKLY, AND WHAT DISTINCTIVE STRATEGIES DO THEY USE?

Together with Wells Fargo, the center and its sponsors dove headfirst into this intriguing question. We emerged from our study with four new insights and perspectives that can help educate middle market stakeholders on the Black-owned business story and pave the way for tapping the full potential of this powerful segment to contribute to the overall middle market's continued prosperity.

4 KEY INSIGHTS

- + Diversity initiatives and programs are shifting away from Black-owned businesses.
- + Programs that contribute to the initial success of Black-owned businesses often end up limiting future growth.
- + Discrimination is a universal experience not likely to go away anytime soon, but it does not define Black business owners or their path forward.
- + Maintaining a separate network and economy is viewed as key to generating opportunity and overcoming challenges.

How the Center's Sponsorship Supports a Global Insurance Provider's Commitment to the Middle Market

In the same way that middle market companies face growth opportunities and business challenges, their risk profiles are unique from their larger and smaller peers. Chubb, a world leader in insurance, has focused on providing insurance and risk solutions tailored to its business clients. Chubb sought to gain a deeper understanding of the sentiments and risk management needs of the middle market to ultimately help these companies better protect their valuable assets.

IT ALL BEGAN WITH A RESEARCH TOPIC

It was the pursuit of greater knowledge that brought Chubb to the National Center for the Middle Market's door in 2018. Chubb started by taking a closer look at middle market manufacturers to explore risks and opportunities for this underserved subsegment of the economy.

Working closely with the center, Chubb helped design and sponsor a research study of strategic and financial decision makers of middle market manufacturing companies. The resulting report on Middle Market Manufacturing, published in June 2018, featured new data-driven insights that became the cornerstone of Chubb's comprehensive campaign to educate insurance brokers and agents on the needs of this distinctive group of businesses. This report has been and continues to be used extensively over the years, serving as an educational piece that helps the insurance industry better understand middle market company's needs.

"Chubb has been an ideal collaborator in supporting the effort to better understand the specific challenges and needs of middle market companies" says Doug Farren, Managing Director of the center. "From the initial research project in 2018 which looked at advanced manufacturing in mid-sized businesses, the team at Chubb has embraced the approach of collecting data from business leaders and then extracting the relevant insights to drive better decisions. From senior leadership to industry practice leaders and the marketing teams that support them, Chubb understands how to effectively shape and execute a differentiated thought leadership platform."

A STRONG RELATIONSHIP MATURES OVER TIME

In the wake of the first research initiative, Chubb leaned into the connection with the center and became a full sponsor in January 2019.

“Through this sponsorship, we have the opportunity to work with this world-class educational university and independent research center that has been studying the middle market for years. We have credible data at our fingertips and the means of really getting to the heart of what our clients are facing as they grow. We aim to use insights about middle market sentiments to educate our team and agent/broker partners on managing client risks, while improving our products and services to better support businesses during challenging times.”

SENIOR VICE PRESIDENT OF CHUBB, DIVISION
PRESIDENT, CHUBB MIDDLE MARKET

In June 2020, Chubb and the center published their second joint research report, Life Sciences in the Middle Market. With the timing of the report's launch coinciding with the early phases of the COVID-19 pandemic, Chubb and center stakeholders alike eagerly consumed the report's content around the impact of the global health crisis on the life sciences industry. The report marked the second highly successful flagship research collaboration between the two organizations.

Along with independent research reports, Chubb is actively involved in the Middle Market Indicator survey process. Chubb helps develop, evaluate and expand the survey's questions to reflect the changing risk environment and drive the meaningful insights. With each new wave of MMI data, Chubb shares the risk management related findings in their own report, with a highlight on the industries Chubb specializes in, such as manufacturing, financial services, life sciences, technology, business services, retail and healthcare, among others. Findings are further promoted to insurance stakeholders via digital channels, webinars and live events.

Chubb actively participates in the center's events, too, including supporting the Middle Market Industry Immersion Program for undergrads at Fisher College of Business and guest starring on The Market that Moves America podcast. Chubb EVP Mike Williams joined the center's Managing Director Doug Farren in October 2023 to talk about navigating challenges and innovation in manufacturing.

The two organizations working closely together year after year has allowed for continued learning about the middle market's evolving risk profile and needs for protection.

“Chubb is our longest running sponsor,” Farren says. “They are extremely knowledgeable about not only the insurance needs of middle market companies but about how these companies are unique in the ways they grow their business and handle a wide variety of opportunities and challenges in an ever-evolving landscape.”

THE FUTURE HOLDS EVEN MORE TO DISCOVER

What’s next up for Chubb and the center? As the middle market continues to grow, drive GDP, and employ more and more people, the ongoing need to continue understanding and supporting the companies in this sector will only grow as well.

New reports on emerging middle market risks are on the horizon, especially as the center and its partners continue to dive deeper into diverse subsegments while expanding the center’s knowledge of the larger North American middle market. Stakeholders can also expect to see further collaboration between the two organizations to cross-promote content, data, products and services in each other’s respective channels.

“We will continue to monitor the market and adapt our approach to address urgent needs. As the middle market drives America forward, we are committed to helping them manage their risks.”

EDUCATION

Putting Insight into Action

Even in a new era of sustained higher performance and growth, skills gaps and resource constraints remain top challenges for middle market companies. Providing focused education for current and future middle market leaders is one way the National Center for the Middle Market helps companies address these challenges head-on. As a core pillar of the center's mission, education is key to turning insights from our research into strategy and tactics middle market leaders and business students can put to work immediately to drive business results.

In 2023 and 2024, the center focused its educational initiatives in two areas: customized executive education for c-suite middle market leaders and internships for undergraduate students majoring in finance, marketing or other related fields.

Executive Education

Connecting Leaders for Learning and Growth

In 2024, the center collaborated with the Ohio Chamber of Commerce to launch the CEO Forum, an executive education program and peer-to-peer network of c-suite leaders of middle market companies. The forum is intentionally designed to empower executives to learn from and share with each other and specifically to seek advice on challenges while accessing tools for scaling the business.

In addition to participating in peer-to-peer monthly meetings, special events and statewide networking opportunities, members of the CEO Forum benefit from executive education delivered through The Ohio State University Max M. Fisher College of Business. Educational sessions feature key insights and findings from the center's studies, including research-based frameworks for growth and success.

The program's first structured POD, or peer group, was made up of six c-suite participants. They completed four educational sessions on key topics between March 2024 and November 2024.

A Look Ahead: Empowering Tomorrow's Middle Market

The past two years have been some of the most exciting for the middle market as companies set and exceed new performance highs and sustain double-digit revenue and employment growth. Middle market executives maintain a positive outlook for the months and year ahead, and the leadership at the National Center for the Middle Market shares that sentiment.

With full expectations for continued strong performance, the center will remain focused on developing a deeper understanding of the issues of immediate importance to middle market leaders in this era of growth, and on sharing those insights with as many stakeholders as possible in ways that best meet each audience group's unique needs.

Going forward, the center will be fully committed to:

Expanding our body of knowledge. This includes both deeper and wider research on critical and emerging topics, such as regulations, talent and advanced technologies, including AI. The center has plans to refresh its semiannual Middle Market Indicator survey to uncover a new layer of insights and discover unexplored facets of middle market performance. The center will also continue building on our inaugural study of Canadian middle market companies, growing our understanding of the larger North American middle market.

Building our audience. Through strategic outreach, the right channels and collaboration with our partners, sponsors and other like-minded organizations, the center will continue to expand our reach and find ways to form deeper and more meaningful connections with all audiences with a stake in better understanding and supporting middle market growth.

Ensuring insights, education and support are as accessible as possible. Understanding the time constraints middle market leaders face as well as the challenges involved with learning how their peers are addressing shared challenges, the center is proactively finding new ways to share key information that can support executive development and growth. This includes shorter format, self-serve educational resources, such as video training modules, and focused content, including spotlights and case stories to highlight strategies and tactics middle market leaders can effectively implement in their own businesses.

While the center will explore innovative ways to continue building our knowledge base and disseminate our findings to our various audiences, we will, as always, remain consistent in keeping the pulse of the middle market and being the go-to source for the most up-to-date data and insights about this sector.
